Course Description: What is Europe? Although it may seem a simple and even rhetorical question, a serious attempt to answer it runs into significant challenges. In the most basic sense, Europe is a geographical term that extends at least as far back as Greek antiquity. However, with its borders in constant flux throughout history, the idea of Europe can rely on geographical definitions only partially. Thus, other factors, primarily political, philosophical, and religious, often defined what Europe was. But these ideas were not any less problematic than the geographical ones. As becomes evident then, regardless of how one approaches the question, there is no simple answer to what Europe is. The idea of Europe has a rich and complex history that has been of increasing interest since the middle of the last century. The aftermath of catastrophic wars and the emergence of the European integration project pushed many to reflect on what being European implies and what Europe is. This course offers an overview of the history of the idea of Europe from antiquity to contemporary times. We will explore and critically reflect on various manifestations of the idea—political, religious, cultural, and geographic. Each of these aspects, and even a combination, dominated the understanding of Europe at different historical periods.

Goals: This course teaches students how to engage in historical, textual, and conceptual analyses. It includes locating original sources, learning about and employing interpretive methods, and developing critical thinking. The writing component of the coursework is designed to help students learn how to formulate their thoughts, develop an argument, and reflect on the reading material.

Audience: This course will interest and benefit students in political science, history, philosophy, European studies, and international studies. A better understanding of the idea of Europe provides not only conceptual clarity but also brings forth practical issues that arise from the way Europe has been imagined within the processes that influence European politics in general and the EU specifically. Although the history of the idea of Europe is not the history of Europe, it can help us capture essential aspects of Europe's political and intellectual development that more conventional accounts tend to overlook.

Assessment: Quizzes – 25%. Each quiz will consist of one open-ended question based on the readings for that day and will take place in the first 10 minutes of class. If you are late or absent without an excuse, you will not be able to re-take the quiz. There are a total of 6 quizzes. Each quiz is worth 5 points, and the lowest grade gets dropped.

Reflection Papers – 60%. At the end of each module, students will submit a reflection paper based on the material for that module. Reflection papers must engage with at least two different readings from the module. Discussions must be meaningful and not just summarize the reading. Papers should be formatted either in APA or MLA (please see 'Helpful Resources' section for guidelines). Submitted papers must be at least 1500 words long excluding references, footnotes, headers, titles, and subtitles. Reflection Papers will always be due at midnight. If you fail to submit the assignment on time, you will be penalized half a letter grade for each day that it is late.

Attendance and participation – 15%. Attendance is mandatory. You are allowed (1) unexcused absence that will not affect your grade. If you must miss more than one day, you will be asked to provide documentation explaining the reason for your absence.

Class discussions are a crucial part of the course. Every Friday is designated for a group discussion and any questions that students may have. You're strongly encouraged to come to class with questions prepared beforehand. Each student is expected to participate in the class discussion in a manner that is respectful to the instructor and to fellow students. Please refrain from using cell phones during class time.
