Course Description

The global popularity of democracy today has been increasingly haunted by its ambiguous meaning and contested substance. While it has been often associated with various ideas such as freedom, equality, constitution, representation, and even revolution, democracy, the venerable Greek term, originally signifies the rule (kratos) by the people (demos). But who are the people? How do and should they rule? What are the justifications and, if any, limitations of their ruling? An investigation on how past political thinkers and activists reflected on these questions not only helps us de-familiarize and problematize current opinions about democracy but also points toward alternative futures of democratic ideals.

This advanced undergraduate course situates the ongoing debates about democracy and its problems in a larger historical and philosophical framework. We will study a sampling of classic and contemporary literature on democracy. We will begin with the history of democracy, ranging from ancient Athenian democracy to revolutionary democracies in the modern world, and draw insights from their advocates and critics. We will then return to the contemporary world and examine debates about the normative values and justifications of democracy. Finally, we will interrogate current challenges to democracy (i.e. populism, racial domination, neoliberalism, social media) and consider various attempts to solve or mitigate these problems.

Course Objectives

1. Foundational Knowledge: Students are expected to understand key historical ideas and moments in the development of democracy and identify key debates in contemporary democratic theory as presented in the course.
2. Application and Integration: Students are expected to develop an ability to apply and synthesize the concepts and arguments they have learned in the course to analyze democratic theories and practices.
3. Learning to Think Differently: Students are expected to develop a reflexive perspective on the reading material. They are also encouraged to develop a capacity to think critically and differently by exploring democratic theories beyond the confine of the canonical traditions and prevailing practices.

Course Requirements and Grading

Your grade for this course will be based on 5 components:

1. Attendance and participation (15%; 5%, 10%)

Attendance (5%) in this course is expected. Role will be taken at the beginning of each class meeting. Excused absences must be consistent with university policies and require appropriate documentation. Additional information can be found here. Students who miss more than 30% of the class (12 class meetings) will not be able to complete/pass the course.

Active in-class participation (10%) is essential to your achievement in this course. When you come to class, you should come prepared to discuss the material that has been assigned for that class. This means that you are expected to do the reading to be covered during a given class in advance and bring your personal insights to an open and fruitful discussion.

2. Weekly discussion posts (15%; 1% each)

In addition to participating during class, you are required to prepare TWO discussion questions for each Friday class meeting which is based on a seminar format. The questions should be well situated in the text and highlight some passages/concepts/arguments of the week's reading that you find important and noteworthy. At least ONE question should refer to the text that the instructor has not lectured on (in most cases, that means the required reading for the class on Friday).

Each question should consist of three components in 4-5 sentences (about 100 words): (i) passages from the reading (with page number, if available) that have drawn your attention; (ii) a brief explanation of how certain arguments/concepts/assumptions in these passages could lead to a puzzle and invites different interpretations; (iii) the question(s) for discussion.

The questions must be posted on our Canvas page by 8PM on Thursday, or the day before in-class presentations. (*You do not have to post discussion questions on the weeks you are assigned to write and present papers. You will receive full credit for that week's discussion post as long as you submit the response paper on time and give the presentation.) Given the timely nature of this assignment, no late post or retrospective make-up will be accepted.

3. Two response papers/seminar presentations (30%; 15% each)

You are required to write TWO response papers (5-6 pages, double-spaced, 12 font, Times New Roman) in lieu of the weekly discussion questions and make TWO brief presentations accordingly at the beginning of the Friday seminar. Your response paper (10%) and in-class presentation (5%) will be evaluated separately.

In the paper, you are expected to critically engage with 1-2 concepts or arguments in the text(s) that you find important and/or fruitful for discussion. Please note: the paper is not a mere summary of the author's arguments but your own reflection on the materials. You must refer extensively to the texts, interpret crucial passages to demonstrate their theoretical import and/or practical significance, and point out the gaps, oversights, and paradoxes in the author's argumentation. A good response paper should have four elements: (i) a clear and strong argumentative thesis; (ii) a short summary of the main points of the author(s); (iii) a well-constructed discussion of your own perspective, especially how and where you agree or disagree with the author(s); (iv) a brief conclusion.

You will have 5-8 minutes for your seminar presentation. At 8 minutes, you will be asked to stop the presentation regardless of your progress. So do NOT read your paper verbatim. Clearly state what you are attempting to prove or assert in the paper (namely, your thesis), present textual evidence for it, and interpret the evidence. You may also want to pose additional questions that could not be fully addressed in your response paper. You are expected to hold a Q&A session following your presentation.

For full credit you must submit your response paper (as a PDF or as a Microsoft Word document) on Canvas by 8 PM on Thursday, or the day before your in-class presentation. The instructor will then distribute your paper to the rest of the class. This will enable your classmates to read and ruminate on your paper before the seminar. Your first response paper/seminar presentation must be done by Week 8. The highest grade for a late response paper in the absence of a legitimate excuse is C+. An example of a legitimate excuse would be an illness for which you have a signed doctor's note. Please be aware: a "C+" is not the lowest grade a late assignment can receive; it is the highest (i.e., it is the ceiling, not the floor).

4. Midterm exam (15%)
5. Final exam (25%)

Both exams will be essay-based and close-book. A list of prompts will be provided in advance. The instructor will randomly pick TWO questions out of the pool at the day of the exam for your choice. You must answer ONE in fifty minutes, for the midterm, and in two hours, for the final.

The course is out of 100 total points, and the Grading Scale is as follows: 93-100 (A); 90-92 (A-); 87-89 (B+); 83-86 (B); 80-82 (B-); 77-79 (C+); 73-76 (C); 70-72 (C-); 67-69 (D+); 63-66 (D); 60-62 (D-); 0-59 (E; failing)

More information on UF grading policy may be found at Grades and Grading Policies. Requirements for class attendance and make-up exams, assignments, and other work in this course are consistent with university policies.

Policy on Academic Integrity

UF students are bound by The Honor Pledge which states, "We, the members of the University of Florida community, pledge to hold ourselves and our peers to the highest standards of honor and integrity by abiding by the Honor Code." On all work submitted for credit by students at the University of Florida, the following pledge is either required or implied: "On my honor, I have neither given nor received unauthorized aid in doing this assignment." The Honor Code specifies a number of behaviors that are in violation of this code and the possible sanctions. Furthermore, you are obligated to report any condition that facilitates academic misconduct to appropriate personnel. If you have any questions or concerns, please consult with the instructor in this class.

Accommodation for Students with Disabilities

Students with disabilities who experience learning barriers and would like to request academic accommodations should connect with the Disability Resource Center. It is important for students to share their accommodation letter with their instructor and discuss their access needs, as early as possible in the semester.

Course Evaluation

Students are expected to provide professional and respectful feedback on the quality of instruction in this course by completing course evaluations online via GatorEvals. Guidance on how to give feedback in a professional and respectful manner is available at <https://gatorevals.aa.ufl.edu/students/>. Students will be notified when the evaluation period opens, and can complete evaluations through the email they receive from GatorEvals, in their Canvas course menu under GatorEvals, or via <https://ufl.bluera.com/ufl/>. Summaries of course evaluation results are available to students at <https://gatorevals.aa.ufl.edu/public-results/>.

Class Demeanor

Students are expected to arrive to class on time and behave in a manner that is respectful to the instructor and to fellow students. Opinions held by other students should be respected in discussion. Your courtesy towards others is key to a lively and enjoyable intellectual environment. Phones should be turned off prior to class.

Policy Regarding in Class Recording

Students are allowed to record video or audio of class lectures. However, the purposes for which these recordings may be used are strictly controlled. The only allowable purposes are (1) for personal educational use, (2) in connection with a complaint to the university, or (3) as evidence in, or in preparation for, a criminal or civil proceeding. All other purposes are prohibited. Specifically, students may not publish recorded lectures without the written consent of the instructor. A “class lecture” is an educational presentation intended to inform or teach enrolled students about a particular subject, including any instructor-led discussions that form part of the presentation, and delivered by any instructor hired or appointed by the University, or by a guest instructor, as part of a University of Florida course. A class lecture does not include lab sessions, student presentations, clinical presentations such as patient history, academic exercises involving solely student participation, assessments (quizzes, tests, exams), field trips, private conversations between students in the class or between a student and the faculty or lecturer during a class session. Publication without permission of the instructor is prohibited. To “publish” means to share, transmit, circulate, distribute, or provide access to a recording, regardless of format or medium, to another person (or persons), including but not limited to another student within the same class section. Additionally, a recording, or transcript of a recording, is considered published if it is posted on or uploaded to, in whole or in part, any media platform, including but not limited to social media, book, magazine, newspaper, leaflet, or third-party note/tutoring services. A student who publishes a recording without written consent may be subject to a civil cause of action instituted by a person injured by the publication and/or discipline under UF Regulation 4.040 Student Honor Code and Student Conduct Code.

Student Privacy

There are federal laws protecting your privacy with regards to grades earned in courses and on individual assignments. For more information, please see the Notification to Students of FERPA Rights.

Material and Supply Fees

There are no additional fees for this course.
