Modern Political Campaigns

POS 4275; Section 4275
Summer A 2024 (5.8.25; Draft 3)

"to make of the columns of The New York Times' a forum for the consideration of all questions of public importance, and to that end to invite intelligent discussion from all shades of opinion." Adolph Ochs, 1896, publisher, NY Times

Goals of the Course

To explore major issues associated with modern political campaigns. Presidential campaigns are a primary, but not exclusive, focus. The emphasis of the course is to investigate why modern campaigns take the forms they do, and to place them in broader American cultural and political contexts. This is NOT a course on how to run campaigns; it is a course on understanding campaign politics.

We take as our starting point that political campaigns mirror American politics generally, warts and all, and are part and parcel of those politics at the time the campaigns take place. The real question is: do our campaigns strengthen our democracy, or not?

Lectures will be presented, but this is primarily a discussion course. As such, coverage of topics will combine much class discussion, some lecture, academic and non-academic readings, guest speakers and other hands-on materials as appropriate to our topics. Students are expected to read the required materials in advance of class, and come prepared to use them as a vehicle for discussion. Attendance will NOT be taken, but students are responsible for everything that happens in class. If a student misses class, it is his/her responsibility to find out what was missed; students are also responsible for all information on the syllabus. Students should take advantage of the instructor's office hours to discuss issues with him. With any luck, you'll be armed and dangerous by the end of the semester.

Reading Materials

Required Books

Political Campaigns in the United States, Richard K. Scher, 2016, Routledge, ISBN 2740355346696
(I encourage you to obtain used or paperback editions)

Students need to read a national newspaper and/or magazine to follow politics and the election cycle. Online versions are fine and probably preferred. It is ESPECIALLY recommended that students examine, on a regular basis, foreign media that have particularly good coverage of American politics and campaigns. As we will be discussing current events every week, several websites and newspapers may come in handy: SayfieReview.com and Sunburn are free and all offer great coverage of all things Florida. There is also fivethirtyeight.com, Politico.com, election.princeton.edu, Politifact.com, Ballotpedia.com, RealClearPolitics.com, NYTimes.com, Pollster.com. There are also free daily emails you can get from NY Times, Washington Post, Wall St. Journal, Palm Beach Post, Tampa Bay Times, Marc Caputo at Politico, Gallup, Pew Surveys and likely many more I am not aware of. There are also tons of great podcasts and I'm certainly unaware of most of them – so please share your favorites with me and I will share some of these with the class. Absorb as much information as you can...or all you can stand.

Required Articles:

There will be other articles as we go and as listed in the Syllabus. I will either provide these or provide a link on Canvas.

¹ And by definition, The University of Florida in the 21st century

Course Schedule

Note, this course schedule is a guideline. I reserve the right to amend it as the semester progresses. In particular, I expect to add several more articles and podcasts as appropriate. I will get these to you in class, on Canvas and via email.

Academic Integrity and Plagiarism

I take academic dishonesty very, very, very, very seriously. If I find evidence of cheating or plagiarism or other academic dishonesty, I will personally initiate disciplinary action.

Students with Special Needs

It is the responsibility of students needing special accommodation for this course to make an appointment to see me at the beginning of the semester. I will make every effort to meet your needs in accordance with UF Guidelines.

Office Hours

Feel free to come to my office hours for any reason, academic or otherwise. If my office hours are not convenient for you, we'll find a time that is. I am also easy to reach by email and typically respond quite quickly; this is the best way to reach me. I personally keep very late hours.
